NHIA welcomes PlayMaker Health to the Future of Infusion Advisory Council

Alexandria, Va and Nashville, Tenn. (November 15, 2021) — The National Home Infusion Association (NHIA) and PlayMaker Health are pleased to announce the addition of PlayMaker to the Future of Infusion Advisory Council (FIAC). The FIAC is a strategic advisory group to NHIA comprised of manufacturing and service companies who are deeply invested in the home and alternate site infusion industry. The group consistently works with the association staff and Board of Directors to address critical issues, challenges, and opportunities facing this growing community.

This strategic partnership between NHIA and PlayMaker Health will bring a unique perspective to the FIAC, adding support for data-driven programs critical to expanding access of home and alternate site infusion.

PlayMaker Health is focused on delivering software and data to HME and infusion agencies that powers measurable growth for their organizations. Integrating with existing EHR and other business systems, PlayMaker's solutions provide market intelligence and insights that enables agencies to support a value-based care approach and improved health outcomes.

"We are pleased to expand our partnership with NHIA through FIAC and connect with other industry leaders to provide members with guidance and support as the healthcare landscape continues to evolve," said Holly Miller, Chief Revenue Officer at PlayMaker.

"We're excited to welcome PlayMaker Health to the FIAC and look forward to building on our existing relationship to promote the value of home and specialty infusion services," said NHIA President & CEO Connie Sullivan, BSPHarm.
